

Dawson Cemetery Inscriptions And Other Vital Records

Dawson, Colfax County, New Mexico

Section 1: The Dawson Cemetery Tombstone Inscriptions and persons not necessarily buried in Dawson Cemetery but listed in the Dawson News, Volumes 1 thru 9, 1921-1929 and their obituaries when available. Also information from family members and people listed on a survey map of the Dawson Cemetery.

Section 2: J. B. Dawson Family Cemetery Inscriptions

Section 3: With permission to reprint an article from the 1993 summer edition of "New Mexico Preservation," by Corinne Sze.

"As a genealogist and family historian I have included material that may be seen as not pertaining to the Dawson Cemetery. I have found in researching my ancestors that were miners, there are few if any records of their existence. Therefore I hope that the information in this booklet and database may aid someone in their search for their ancestry."

I would like to add a special thanks to all the people who submitted information, either through their personal research or personal family knowledge. With their help, this project gives a wealth of information that would not be available otherwise. Compiler: Vivien A. Andrews, a descendant of Newton and Alvin C. Davis, Coal Miners.

The Dawson Coal Mines opened as early as 1896 when J. B. Dawson sold the mineral rights to The Dawson Fuel Co. The Phelps Dodge Corporation purchased the mines around 1903. Dawson coal mines closed in 1950. Like so many towns that were owned by a mining company, when the coal mines closed so did the town.

Most of the miners who died in the explosions of September 14, 1903, October 22, 1913 or February 8, 1923 have a white metal miners cross that was supplied by Phelps Dodge Corporation. Nationalities are noted when known or suspected, as per the New Mexico Mine Inspectors 2nd Annual Report of Mines for the 1913 explosion. The 1903 explosion killed 3 men, 1913 explosion killed 263 men and the 1923 explosion killed 120 men.

"There are about 70 Miners Cross' with no dates or names inscribed."

* Miners that may or may not be buried in the Dawson Cemetery that lost their lives in the October 22, 1913 explosion. The names came from a published list of the New Mexico Mine Inspectors 2nd Annual Report of Miners that died in the October 22, 1913 explosion as well as the tombstones and miners cross' in the cemetery.

 Miners that may or may not be buried in the Dawson Cemetery that lost their lives in the explosion of February 8, 1923. The 1923 miners names came from a list published in The Dawson News, names from the NMDI (New Mexico Death Index) as well as the tombstones and miners cross' in the cemetery.

 These people may or may not be buried in the Dawson Cemetery. Relatives of the deceased have stated that they believe their ancestors were buried there and the dates when know. Added to this list are names and obituaries found in the Dawson News, Volumes 1 through 9, 1921-1929, the only years the News was published and names from the NMDI (New Mexico Death Index.

* Men that lost their lives in the 1903 fire in No. 1 mine. Three men died while 500 were able to escape. The source for this information is from "The Dawson Tragedies" by F. Stanley, December 1964.

 People that have passed away that lived in Dawson at one time but are not buried in the Dawson Cemetery unless stated. Names and dates submitted by friends and relatives.

 These names were taken from "Dawson Cemetery, Family Members", September 1981, Compiled by: Sharon Ann Burt, Betty Kropf Fager, Greta Gallagher and Nancy Robertson. Edited by Nancy Robertson. Friends of Raton Anthropology, Raton, NM, 87740, Vol. 6, No. 5. Permission to include and add the names from this list to my database was given by Nancy Robertson. The names and inscriptions from the "Dawson Cemetery, Family Members" are important because the list is over 21 years old and many of the markers have either disappeared or are unreadable.

~* Names from a partial index to papers filed in the District Court of the Eighth Judicial District of the State of New Mexico sitting within an for the County of Colfax, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, Section 12, Chapter 83, 1917 Session Laws, Phelps Dodge Corp., by Crampton & Darden, Attorneys for the Employer.
The Original papers, sometimes containing additional information, may be found in the Office of the District Court Clerk, on the third flour of the Colfax County Courthouse in Raton, New Mexico.

"This information submitted and permission to included it in this book was given to me by Nancy Robertson, as it pertains to the Application for Workman's Compensation data."

with Average Weekly Earnings of $30.00.

"The names marked with a Plot, Block and Grave Number were found on the Cemetery, Dawson, NM survey map."

The following database is as accurate as we could make it. The Cemetery is old and was unkept for many year following the close of the mine in 1950. It is now on both the State and National Registers of Historic Places. This however will not keep it from natures forces and there are no caretakers to set the overturned stones. Many of the tombstones are made of sandstone and reading the inscriptions were difficult if not impossible. There were many different nationalities in Dawson and we have attempted to translate the tombstone transcriptions as best we could. The languages we were working with were: Italian, Spanish, French, German, Greek, Serbian, Croatian, Slovenian & English.

This data is the joint effort of Irma & Buddy Morse, curators of the Old Mill Museum, Ethel Ramsey, and Bob & Vivien Andrews all residents of Cimarron, Colfax County, New Mexico. A special thanks to John & Peggy Bizyak for the calendar translations in Serbian, Croatian, & Slovenian.

Please note that most of these names were taken directly from the tombstones in the cemetery and errors may have occurred due to the difficulty in deciphering the engravings. Some tombstones were badly damaged do to the extreme force of the wind and rain we have in New Mexico. Some tombstones are made of sandstone so there inscriptions may have all but disappeared. The cemetery is unkept except for every two years just before the Dawson Reunions takes place. The Dawson Reunion Committee mows the weeds and tries to right the headstones that have fallen over.

A special thanks to the "Descendants of the Town of Dawson" that gave me new or corrected information about the people they knew in Dawson.

Allison, Virginia	1903-May 1927	Buried in Cimarron
Note: NMDawson News, May 27, 1927; OBITUARY Mrs. Virginia Allison, daughter of Joseph W. Swearingen, was born at Elizabethtown, New Mexico, and had just recently passed her 24th birthday. She was stricken with flu a short time ago and later developed pneumonia and was at the Dawson Hospital for care and treatment. Sunday her condition became very grave and her brother, who was attending school in the East was sent for. She continued to grow worse and passed away Wednesday morning. Mrs. Allison, who spent all of her short life in the community in which she was born, was familiarly known to most of here friends as Virginia. She was greatly loved and her sudden and unexpected death brings deep sorrow to her relatives and all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. She attended the Cimarron school from which she was graduated. For the past three years she had resided at Dawson where she was housekeeper for Father Joseph, who paid a beautiful tribute to her memory and deeply regretted her death. Her remains were taken to Cimarron where funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in charge of Rev. Chester Carwardine. The church was filled to capacity with sorrowing friends. A great profusion of beautiful floral offerings, covering the casket and banked about it, giving mute evidence of the love and affection for the young mother who had been suddenly called from the midst of lifelong friends. Following the services burial was made in the Cimarron cemetery by the side of her mother. Mrs. Allison is survived by her five year old daughter, Winifred, her father, Mr. Joseph Swearingen, her sister, Mrs. E.G. Kilmurray, and one brother, Joseph, Jr., besides a wide circle of friends, all of whom keenly feel her passing.-Raton Reporter. NMDI: Allison, Virginia E., died 05/18/1927, in Colfax County.

Clouthier, Roy Died March 1927 Burial in Springer, NM

Note: Dawson News, March 3, 1927: ROY CLOUTHIER DEAD- Roy Clouthier, age 38, died at the Dawson hospital at 11 o'clock Thursday night, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Clouithier was taken to the hospital Thursday of last week in a critical condition and the operation, which followed almost immediately was thought to have been successful. But complications of paresis of the intestines developed, due to the due to the severity of the attack. An attempt was made to relieve this condition by a secondary emergency operation, but without success. Subsequent knowledge showed however, that no method of treatment could have saved his life at anytime during the attack. Everything that medical science could offer was of no avail. Mr Clouthier was born in Springer, New Mexico and has been a resident of Colfax county all his life, for many years making his home in Dawson where he was in the employment of the Phelps-Dodge Mercantile company. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity and a past master of the Springer lodge of A. F. & A. M. Besides his wife, he is survived by his father and mother, two brothers, Blanche Clouthier of Dawson and Arthur Clouthier of McNarry, Arizona, and a sister, Mrs. George Webster, of Cimarron, NM. The funeral services will be held in Springer Thursday afternoon and burial will follow in the Springer Cemetery. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the members of the family in their bereavement.

Corbett, Ed* Died: December 30, 1931 Buried in Springer, NM

Note: Dawson News, January 3, 1929: COLFAX COUNTY PIONEER DIES AT VERMEJO PARK-Ed Corbett, one of the early pioneers of Colfax county, died at Vermejo Park early Sunday morning, according to word received here by friends. Mr. Corbett was one of the oldest residents of this section, and was well known thru out northern New Mexico and southern Colorado. For a number of years he has been employed at the Bartlett ranch, and at the time of his death was foreman of the ranch. Richard Corbett of Dawson, who is the son of the deceased, first received word of his father’s illness Christmas Day and immediately left for Vermejo Park. Mr. Corbett’s Condition seemed to be improving and his son returned to Dawson in the belief that his father was well on the way to recovery. Saturday word was received that Mr. Corbett’s condition had become critical, so his son left again for Vermejo Park and arrived a few hours before the end came. Burial was made in the Springer cemetery Monday afternoon.

Gostovich, Ilija	1890-February 14, 1925	Dawson News, February 19, 1925: ELI GOSTOVICH DIES Eli Gostovich of No. 7 Camp, a resident of Dawson for a number of years died at the Dawson hospital Saturday afternoon. Mr Gostovich suffered an attack of pneumonia several days ago and was removed to the hospital, where he failed to make expected improvements. His condition gradually became worse and the end came at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Mr. Gostovich came to Dawson in 1912 and has been continually in the employment of the company since that date. He was a member of the Slavish Society of Illinois and other fraternal organizations. A wife and seven small children are left to mourn his death. Burial was made in the Dawson Cemetery, Monday afternoon.

Tomorrow recalls sad memories of our loved one gone to rest. And we who always miss him, are the ones who loved him best. Some may think he is forgotten, and the wound has long been healed. But, oh, they do not know the sorrow, that lies in our hearts, concealed. A year has passed and hearts still sore, as time goes on we miss him more. His loving smile, his loving face. No one can fill his vacant place, He is gone but not forgotten. Never shall his memory fade, sweetest thought shall ever linger. Round the grave where he is laid, sadly missed by his wife and daughter. Mrs. Alex Kerr and Sarah.

Kinney, T. L.	Sept. 17, 1873-March 26, 1924	Buried at Trinidad, Co. Newspaper Notice, April 3, 1923. T. L. Kinney Laid to Rest in Trinidad Cemetery. The funeral of T. L. Kenny was held from the Dawson Opera House Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, after which the body was taken to Trinidad, where burial was made in the family plot in the Trinidad cemetery. At Dawson simple and impressive funeral services were held which were in charge of a committee composed of the members of the Masonic, Knights of Pythias and Elks lodges of which he was a member. The opera house was filled to overflowing with friends who came to pay their last respect to one of Dawson's pioneer citizens. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Russell and several selections of music were beautifully sung by a mixed quartet. Around the casket there was a great bank of beautiful floral offerings which had been presented by a legion of friends. D. G. Secrest, Frank Shelton, Louis Savio, A. M. Van Dyke, Dr. F. C. Diver, W. G. Moore, T. C. Hill, J. J. Laubach, Enrique Marcs and W. T. Rush, personal friends of Mr. Kinney, acted as pall bearers and members of the Masonic, Knights of Pythias and Elks lodges formed an honorary escort. Following the service at Dawson, the funeral cortege passed to Trinidad, where members of the various Masonic bodies of that city joined the procession to the cemetery. At Trinidad members of the Scottish Rite acted as pall bearers and the Trinidad

Kinney, one of the oldest residents of Dawson, died at his office in the opera house Wednesday afternoon, March 26th, following a shock from which he never regained consciousness. He was in his 51st year. His career as a faithful employee of the Phleps Dodge Corporation,
his private and public life, was closely linked with the progress of the town of Dawson, in which he spent almost a quarter of a century.
Faithful to the end, death overtook him in the performance of his duty, diligent in the work which was his to do. T. L. Kinney was born in Newark,
Indiana, September 17th, 1873 and died in Dawson, New Mexico, March 26th, 1924, at the age of 50 years, 6 months and 9 days. At about five years of age he came West with his parents and the family home was established in Starkville, Colo., where he received his early education. His first employment was as a clerk with the Santa Fe railroad at Starkville. His advancement in the clerical field was rapid. He was chief clerk at Madrid, New Mexico, and later for the Colorado Fuel and Iron company at Walsenburg. In 1903 Mr. Kinney came to Dawson to accept a similar position at the time W. P. Thompson was general manager. From 1903 he was identified with the development of Dawson, being rewarded with promotions to positions of trust and responsibility, holding the position of Town Supervisor since 1908. Mr. Kinney was prominent in the lodge circles of his home community and throughout the state. He was formerly a member of the Gate City Masonic Lodge at Raton, and was the secretary of the Vermajo Lodge No. 36, A. F. & A. M. of Dawson. At the time of his death he was the only resident charter member of the Dawson Lodge. He was also a member of the Scottish rite Consistory of New Mexico, and a member of the Knight Templars of Raton. He was the first Worthy Patron of the Order of the Eastern Star of Dawson.

Among other fraternal organizations, he was an honored member of Dawson City Lodge No. 30, Knights of Pythias, and a Past Grand Chancellor of the Domain of New Mexico. With the exception of one year he attended every session of the New Mexico Knights of Pythias Grand Lodge during the past twenty years. He was also a member of Raton Lodge No. 963, B. P. O. Elks. For eighteen years Mr. Kinney was Justice of the Peace of the Dawson precinct and for nineteen years was secretary of the School Board. He was also a prominent figure in the political life of his community and the state, being precinct chairman of the Republican party and a delegate in the recent state convention at Santa Fe. Mr. Kinney is survived by his wife and two small children of Dawson; a son, Ted Kinney of Bisbee, Arizona, and two married daughters, Mrs. Cecil Long of Alamogordo, New Mexico and Mrs. Charles McGowan of Bisbee, Arizona. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Russell at the Dawson

LOCAL HOSPITAL
Geraldine Mullen, six year-old daughter of Mr. And Mrs. Frank Mullen, passed away at the local hospital about midnight Wednesday.
Her passing brings to a close a most heroic struggle to regain health and to enjoy the coming years of childhood which had just commenced to unfold. About six weeks ago she suffered an attack of influenza which developed into pneumonia. Ten day ago her condition became worse and she was removed to the company hospital.
Here she continued her brave fight and on Saturday of last week
she was thought to be on the way to recovery.
The entire community was shocked to learn of her death Wednesday night following a sudden relapse.
Funeral services were held at the Community church Friday Afternoon. Floral offerings of unsurpassed beauty filled the front of the church and a legion of friends were in attendance. She was laid to rest in the Dawson cemetery.

Quesada, Mrs. Blasa Abitia Jan. 1823-Jan. 24, 1923		Newspaper: "Dawson Centenarian Answers Call of Death". Mrs. Blasa Abitia Quesada, who celebrated her one hundredth birthday during the past month, answered the call of death Saturday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Luz Sepulveda, 2008 No. 5 hill. Mrs. Quesada was well known to a large number of Dawson people, having made her home in this community for the past seven years. Almost to the very hour of her death she had enjoyed reasonably good health, doing many of the lighter household duties in the home of her daughter. Saturday morning she was about the house as usual, but at 1:00 o'clock complained of feeling ill and went to bed. She soon lapsed into unconsciousness and passed away two hour later. Mrs. Quesada was the mother of 12 children, six of whom preceded her in death. Her husband died in Old Mexico in 1910. She leaves five daughters and one son; Mrs Antonia Q. De Avila, Mrs. Lu Q. Sepulveda, and Mrs. Manuela Q. Quinones, all of Dawson, New Mexico; Mrs. Marcella Q. Galindo, Mrs. Crus Q. Renturia and Juan Quesada, all of Juarez, Old Mexico.

Sherfick, Elmer E.	Died: Feb. 17, 1922	Buried in Trinidad, Co. Newspaper: Mr. Elmer E Sherfick, died at the local hospital early Friday morning. While the people of Dawson had known for several days that Mr. Sherfick was in a critical condition, news of his death came as a shock to the members of his family and his many friends. During the past year there had been periods when Mr. Sherfick had not enjoyed the best of health, but it was not until about three weeks ago that he was confined to his bed. Plans were immediately made for securing special treatment at a Denver hospital, but the seriousness of his condition would not permit his removal. A few days ago he was removed from his home to the local hospital, where everything in the power of attending physicians and consulting specialists was done for him, but to no avail. Mr. Sherfick wa one of the best known men in Dawson, and his passing has cast a gloom over our midst such as can only be cast with the realization that death has claimed one of our most beloved and highly respected citizens. For many years Mr. Sherfick labored in the activities of the community of which he was a part. In the performance of his duties as a tradesman in the shops

and mines, he was ever industrious and conscientious; in organizations with which he was connected having for their object the development of a sprit of brotherhood among men, he was a loyal and faithful member.

Funeral services were held from the home in Dawson at 2:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after which the body was taken to Trinidad for burial. The services at Trinidad were in charge of the Trinidad Masonic lodge of which he was a member. Mr. Sherfick was also a member of the Knights of Pythias and Moose lodges. The Dawson News joins those who were privileged to have known him, in expressing sincere sympathy to the members of the family in their bereavement.

Section 2: J. B. Dawson Family Cemetery Inscriptions

This is the Family Cemetery of John Barkley Dawson. It is situated on the west side of the Vermejo River. The names on the list below are from a book written by Delphine Dawson Wilson, "John Barkley Dawson, Pioneer, Cattleman, Rancher" and a personal correspondence from Dale Dawson, a descendant of J. B. Dawson.

Sometime before J. B. Dawson died he had a monument put in the little Dawson Family Cemetery. It reads as follows:

" This monument marks the burying place of J. B. Dawson's father, mother, wife Laura, three children, two infant grand daughters, only sister, Uncle and Aunt Miller, some friends. Done in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and six."

Laura Stout Dawson	died: June 2, 1872	J. B. Dawson's 2nd wife

Section 3: Reprint from the 1993 Summer edition of “New Mexico Preservation,” by Corinne Sze.

The following is reprinted from the 1993 Summer edition of “New Mexico Preservation” the quarterly newsletter of the State of New Mexico Historic Preservation Division. The information was researched and written by Corinne Sze. It was first printed in the Raton Range in three parts in 1993.

The Dawson Cemetery is the best and only complete resource representative of the town of Dawson, at one time the largest coal-mining community in the Raton coal field of northeastern New Mexico.

Dawson was one of a number of company towns developed by the Dodge Mining Company, which purchased the Dawson coal mines and townsite in 1906.

Although many variations existed, a company town was generally created around a single industrial operation and was owned and operated by the company which operated the industry.

That is, the company owned all homes, business and public buildings, recreational facilities, utilities, the company store and so on. Any private businesses were leased from the company and existed at its pleasure. Some 200 company towns have been identified as having existed in 11 western states.

The company town was crucial to the development of coal industry and from coal-mining camps has come the unsavory reputation of company towns in general as squalid places of low wages, substandard housing, high prices and perpetual debt.

Abuses in company towns often exposed by the union movement and detailed in reports of federal investigations of conditions in the coal industry. In the early part of the 20th century, however, some companies had established a new sort of planned community; Dawson is an example of one such well-run company town with, by all accounts, exceptional community services and strong community spirit.

The history of mining in the Raton Field parallels that of the coal industry generally. Dawson’s coal production peaked around World War I and declined thereafter.

Although Dawson profited from the brief resurgence of demand for coal during World War II, after the war demand fell sharply, as coal was completely replaced by oil and natural gas, as the major fuels for transportation and heating. When the Southern Pacific converted entirely to diesel in 1949, Phelps Dodge lost its last major customer for Dawson coal.

On Feb. 25, 1950, Phelps Dodge posted notices that the town of Dawson was closing. The mines were to be shut down and its residents evicted. Most of the town was either moved, torn down, or salvaged, in order to remove it from the tax rolls.

Like other coal-mining areas, the Raton coal field included large numbers of immigrants. Before the coming of the railroad and the opening of large coal mines, European migration to this region of New Mexico had been slight. In the new mining towns, a majority of the population was typically of foreign birth, with Italian, Slavs and Greeks predominating after the turn of the century.

Often leaving behind families, these men came to New Mexico, seeking economic opportunity as miners, or as skilled or unskilled laborers. Many eventually were able to bring others to the United States, including wives, relatives and friends.

A high proportion became American citizens and many went on to open businesses in Raton and nearby towns.

In 1910, more than 70 percent of Dawson miners were European immigrants, while Spanish-speaking natives of New Mexico and of Mexico made up roughly 18 percent of the total work force and English-speaking employees, including Americans and African-American, constituted only 12 percent of the total.

Around World War I, Dawson reportedly had one of the largest groups of Italians, from the Province of Lucca, to be found west of Chicago. By 1919, the percentage of Europeans had decreased and the proportion of Spanish-speaking miners had increased markedly, a trend that continued until the 1920's.

Dawson residents lived either in the townsite, or in areas in the mountains, close to the mines, called "camps". Housing was assigned according to availability and anyone could apply for a vacancy anywhere. During the years of peak coal production, it was difficult to get housing and families sometimes had to double-up in the same house.

Although people tended to live near where they worked, with management generally downtown and miners near the mines, even this separation was not hard and fast.

Some camps were associated with particular ethnic groups, but the overwhelming recollection of Dawson residents is, that groupings were by choice and that the living areas were ethnically-mixed.

The one exception to this rule was the African-American, many of whom worked as mule skinnners. They lived together, in a group of houses that were not ordinarily assigned to miners of other races.

The Cultural Properties review Committee voted, in 1992 to place the Dawson Cemetery in the State Register of Cultural Properties and to nominate it to the National Register of Historic Places and , on April 9, 1992, this property was placed on the National Register.

Nominations of cemeteries to the National Register are relatively uncommon. The regulations for the Register (36 CFR 60) state that, ordinarily, cemeteries are not eligible to the Register unless they meet special considerations.

The consideration are, that the cemetery in question derives its significance from graves of persons of transcendent importance, from age, from distinctive design features, or from association with historic events.

The committee felt and the Register agreed, that the Dawson Cemetery met this consideration because of its association with the broad patterns of immigration to this country, with the history of coal mining and company towns and specifically its association with two of the worst underground mine disasters in the history of American coal mining.

A death in Dawson was felt as a loss to a whole community. Festive wakes were customary in the home of the deceased and these were attended by friends of any nationality. The solidarity of the community was strongly expressed in the rituals of death.

The possibility of explosion was an ever-present danger in the underground coal mining, where highly flammable methane gas and coal dust could become concentrated in small enclosed spaces and explosive, as well as electrical wiring, were part of the mining process. Despite a reputation for being the best-equipped mines in the area, with state-of-the-art safety equipment and well-trained rescue squads, the Dawson mines were the site of two of the worst accidents in the history of American coal mining.

On Oct. 22, 1913, Just days after the state inspector had pronounced Mine No. 2 in "splendid condition," an underground explosion was caused by an over-charged shot, fired while all the men were in the mine. Ignited coal dust propagated the explosion to all parts of the mine and flames shot 200 feet out the mouth of the tunnel. As a result, the Stag Canyon Fuel Company issued orders that all shot would be fired only by the most experienced shot-firers and only after all men were out of the mine.

A total of 263 men were killed in the accident, including the general superintendent of the mine and two rescue personnel. Only on e previous reported explosion in an American coal mine had taken more lives.

The majority of the men killed were of foreign nationality. Only 39 (including nine men identified as "Negro") of those listed among the dead were American.

Undertakers from neighboring communities were called in to assist and coffins were shipped from Las Vegas, Raton and Albuquerque, as well as Trinidad and other places.

Funeral services were held over lines of black caskets, laid out on the floor of a temporary morgue. Some bodies were never identified. Some of the dead were transported to family plots in other cities, but the majority, especially those who were recent immigrants to the United States, were buried in Dawson, in graves marked by gray iron crosses.

All burial expenses were borne by the company, including a plot in the company cemetery. Each widow was given $2000 and an offer of travel money to return to relatives in Europe.

On Feb. 8, 1923, another disastrous explosion rocked Dawson, trapping 122 men underground, in Mine No. 1. Arcing trolley and feed wires ignited a dust explosion, after a derailment had knocked down the timbers to which they were attached. The initial explosion was again propagated by dust throughout the mine. Only two men escaped alive; 18 hours after the explosion, they walked out of the mine, unharmed and unaided.

Once again, a significant number (48) of the 120 dead were of European citizenship, although this was a considerably smaller percentage than the proportion of Europeans killed in the earlier disaster. Nearly as many American (43) were killed, as well as 28 Mexican nationals.

A temporary morgue was set up in an office building near the scene. The Phelps Dodge undertaker was assisted by two colleagues from Las Vegas. Plain gray or black caskets were brought from all over the state and funerals were held by an Italian Catholic priest for the Italians another priest for English-speaking Catholics and by a Protestant minister for the rest. The graves, again, were marked by gray iron crosses.

It is not known, precisely, when the cemetery was established; the oldest recorded date of death on an inscription is May 12, 1906. Except for the miners' crosses, presumably purchased by the company, grave markers and decoration were privately provided, without company-imposed restrictions. This freedom, combined with the number of different nationalities and the range of sources for markers, led to the striking variety of decor.

Hispanics seemed to follow the local tradition of hand-made wooded markers. Sometimes these graves were surrounded by a rectangular fence, locally called a cuna (cradle), or cerquita (little Fence), a custom believed to have been brought to New Mexico, along with the use of grave markers, by 19th-century Anglo-American influence. Other nationalities also used fences at Dawson and individual burial places are frequently defined by concrete curbing, a line of stones, or a cement or stone slab.

Grave markers were obtained from a number of sources. Many were homemade of wood, stone, concrete, or metal. Italian stone masons, working for Phelps Dodge, made tombstones on the side. John Moruzzi carved sandstone markers from patterns in a book, until his death in about 1925. A number of sandstone markers in the oldest section and the miners' section are of similar design and may be his.

Joe Cicone, who was in Dawson until it closed, was another mason who may have made tombstones. Granite and marble stones could be purchased through the mercantile store in Dawson, or the funeral parlors in larger towns, such as Raton and Las Vegas, or Trinidad and Pueblo, Colo. Salesmen from the more-distant towns came around, with pictures of designs. A number of interesting wrought-iron markers are of unidentified source and nationality.

The most common decorative motif is the cross, reflecting the predominance of the Roman Catholic religion. The number of sources of markers, either homemade, produced by a local mason, or perhaps a local blacksmith, purchased from any number of mortuaries in different towns, or chosen from a traveling salesman's illustrations, partially accounts for the diversity of individual markers within the same ethnic group and for the similarity of sandstone markers which cuts across ethnic lines.

This variety contrasts strongly with the lack of individual response that characterizes the modern memorial garden, with its rows of identical, industrially-produced, two-dimensional metal plates. Most of the inscriptions on the stones are in foreign languages.

Despite an emphasis on learning English and the fact that many Dawson residents became citizens, they returned finally to their linguistic roots. Most of the names on the markers bear witness to the southern and eastern European, or Hispanic, origins of many of Dawson's residents. Although clusters of stones in the same language indicated some grouping by nationality, no areas appear to be strictly limited to a particular people.

Since Dawson closed in 1950, some burials have been moved to other locations and other graves have been neglected, particularly in the older section outside of the miners' cemetery.

Nevertheless, despite the passage of more than 40 years, relatives still visit and attend to many of the graves and in a few cases, new markers have been added to existing grave sites.

Perhaps because of the extremely isolated location, there has been little systematic vandalism, beyond the destruction of portraits on grave markers. Most of the cemetery is intact and well represents its historical and cultural associations. Recently the Phelps Dodge Mining company financed a major refurbishing, with particular attention to the miners' section.

The Dawson Cemetery was found to be significant, under Criterion A of the criteria, for eligibility to the National Register, because of its association with several important themes in New Mexican and American history; Underground coal mining, coal mining explosion accidents, the early 20th-century immigrant experience and the company town.

The cemetery is the last intact and best physical representation of the town of Dawson and the history with which it was associated. It is the only part of the former town open to visitors without prior permission. Since the town records are either destroyed, or lost, the cemetery is also one of the best primary sources of many kinds of demographic data. The cemetery is singularly significant for its association with historic events connected with the history of coal mining, not only the development of the Raton Field, a major resource and the formation of company towns, but also the catastrophic accidents and extensive loss of life associated with underground mining. In holding the graves of many men killed in mining accidents, as well as of the 383 men killed in two of America's worst underground coal mine explosions, the cemetery commemorates events of national significance. These individual tragedies illustrate a part of the price paid for American industrial development. The row upon row of identical iron crosses are a moving statement.

The cemetery is also significant for the concentration of immigrant burials, primarily Mexican and European. Mediterranean and eastern European nationalities represent the majority waves of American immigration in the early 20th century, but are not typical of New Mexico immigration patterns, as generally understood.

The persons buried are significant, not for the importance of any particular individual, or group, but as an aggregate of those who came to the United States, looking for economic opportunity.

They are a tangible reminder of the exertion and sacrifice of those men and women to overcome language and cultural barriers and sometimes lack of skill to create a better life than that obtainable in Europe or Mexico and in a few cases the Orient. In the process, they provided the manpower that made possible the growth of American industry.

These graves are tangible expression of cultural diversity. Demographic data could be gleaned from the dates, age, nationalities and causes of death of the deceased.

A systematic inventory of the markers for style, language and inscription content, as well as the styles of grave delineation and decoration, could have bearing on many questions, such as the attitude toward death among people for whom it is a fact of daily life and changes over time in these attitudes. Comparison with contemporary practices in countries of origin could help define the immigrant response to the problem of adaption, versus maintenance of tradition.

It would appear that, among the Europeans, ethnicity was more rooted in language, than in the style of markers.

Despite their efforts to learn English and the vigorous and successful encouragement of their children to become Americanized, in death these people returned, almost universally, to their native languages.

The Dawson cemetery was also found to be eligible to the National Register under Criterion D. Cemeteries have belatedly come to be recognized for the cultural legacy they embody and their capacity to yield, through systematic study, information about the attitudes and the conditions that created them.

The products of particular circumstances of history, economics, sociology and psychology, cemeteries, in the words of Richard Francaviglia, "Mirror the living and not the dead" and they may "tell us a great deal about living people who created them."

Cemeteries have proven to be invaluable resources for investigation of such questions as settlement and immigration patterns, social status and social organization of various groups and changes in the attitudes of the living toward death.

The special and narrowly-defined circumstances of history, which created the Dawson Cemetery, render it a particularly apt subject of controlled, comparative studies and suggest a number of specific areas for research.

For example, one might explore the relationship between the settlement patterns of the town and the cemetery. On initial examination, it would appear that the cemetery was populated in much the same way as the town.

The living tended, by choice, to live in ethnically-defined groups, but were not limited to these. The option of choosing to live anywhere there was available housing, led to a situation that Dawson residents remember as a remarkable mixing of people from different ethnic backgrounds, with the notable exception of African-Americans. So too, in the cemetery, graves seem to have been placed where people chose to put them.

Though they appear to be grouped very loosely, by language or religion, the over-whelming impression is of a striking mix of ethnic origin.
